2.請依序作答，並標明題號。答案應簡明扼要，只寫重要詞彙約一到五個英文單詞(words)。每題二分，共 10 分。注意：請勿抄下整句或整行，否則不予計分。

Traveling, for many people, is a normal part of life and these days, it is popular for young people to travel by themselves or with a friend. Independent travel is rewarding as it gives people a sense of achievement and greater freedom. Nevertheless, it also takes lots of preparation to line up one's won trip.

If you are considering, an independent journey, you need first of all to pick your destination and make use of a good guidebook to get all the information you need about that place. Second, when you travel, remember to pack light so that you can carry your luggage more easily. You also need to prepare a safe bag to place your money, tickets and important documents. While traveling, you need to be flexible because sometimes things may not happen as planned. For example, you may miss a train or some problem may pop up with your motel reservation. If this should happen, instead of getting upset, you need to be open-minded and find a solution.

The number of people who enjoy traveling around with backpacks is increasing. Traveling in this way, a visitor can get a deeper insight into a country when he catches local buses, meets local people and stays in cheep guesthouses. Another bonus of independent travel is that it is less costly. This will allow a visitor to travel longer.

If you are planning your next vacation and you have a tight budget, why not give independent travel a try?

1. Based on this passage, state one aspect of independent travel that may discourage people from taking one.
2. Where does the author suggest independent travelers keep their visas and passports?
3. How should travelers react if something unexpected pops up and spoils their trip?
4. Name one way by which a foreign visitor can learn more about a country he visits.
5. How many advantages of independent travel are mentioned in this passage?
